Official Opening of Our Town's New Pool And Was Well-Attended

Good Program of Aquatic Sports, Games and Dancing

A splendid crowd attended the official opening of the new Swimming Pool on Friday evening. The weather, a part from a fairly strong wind which died down conveniently as the evening progressed, was quite propitious.

Mr. C. T. Hall had been selected as official opener, and he, in a few well chosen words performed his duties in a very capable manner. In the course of his remarks he made reference to the fact that he had also officiated at the opening of the old pool, 14 years ago. He said he was proud to act in such a capacity and to belong to a community which had shown the co-operative spirit to such a degree as to make the New Pool possible.

In thanking those who had Mr. Hall particularly congratulated our own Hugh McColeman, a Redcliff boy, who acted in the capacity of engineer. Hugh did a good job and his fellow citizens are proud of him.

Mr. Hall also extended the thanks of the community to the building committee, composed of Messrs. N. Madras, J. R. Mackenzie and G. Huxley for their splendid contribution to the welfare of the community in bringing to completion the construction of a pool which does credit to our town and also to themselves.

The thanks of the community were also extended to the Post President, J. Hope, Secretary B. Allen and all those who in any way contributed to the success of the enterprise.

The pool will stand as a monument to the memory of all those who contributed so splendidly to the consummation of this community project.

Mr. Hall called upon Mayor Sangster and J. R. Mackenzie for a few words in which both thanked those who had taken any part in helping with the work.

Mrs. Sangster was then presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, and the pool was declared officially opened.

Mr. G. H. Werts then took charge of the aquatic sports. Mr. C. Burr was official starter and Dr. Lewis and C. T. Hall acted as judges.

Several bottles had been erected on the grounds where sports and refreshments were well patronized. The grounds had been strung with electric lights, which proved most convenient and added much to the festivity of the scene.

Later in the evening a dance was held in Cliff Hall. It was well attended and a goodly sum has been added to the treasury of the Swimming Pool as a result.

Several visitors from Medicine Hat were present. Among those noticed were Dr. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Down, Dr. Moore, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Boyd, Mr. Warham, Mr. and Mrs. Pushe, Mr. Roxborough, Mr. A.

Atkins, Mr. and Mrs. R. Klemm, Mr. Geo. Cantilini, Mr. R. Pickering and others.

The Swimming pool is now away to a good start. It now remains in the hands of other committees which have been appointed, to make as good a job of the grounds surrounding the pool. It is expected that by next year there will be dressing rooms in keeping with the pool. No doubt trees, shrubs and grass will be planted and a War Memorial erected which will make the park second to none in the province, for towns the size of Redcliff.

The following boys and girls were the winners of the different contests in the Swimming Pool:

Boys 7 yrs. and under, Jimmy Mackenzie, Russell Hime.

Class Factory Grounds Have A Fine Lawn

In The Centre - A Flower Garden of Diamond D. Shape

During the past few months, a great improvement has been made in the grounds of the Dominion Glass Factory here.

Near the entrance to the grounds, which cover several acres, a fine lawn has been sown. Trees and shrubs have been planted at pleasing intervals around the lawn and in the centre has been placed a lovely bed of flowers representing by its shape and artistic arrangement of colors, the Trade Mark of the Dominion Glass Co.—The Diamond D.

This fine piece of landscape gardening is in the capable hands of Mr. Oldfield, an employee of long standing with the Glass Co.

Mr. Oldfield is receiving the congratulations of many visitors to the work he has accomplished in such a short time. The Glass from from Leonard, Alta., a beautiful spot of Redcliff and is now attracting much notice.

Mr. J. R. Mackenzie leaves today for Montreal on business for the Dominion Glass Co.

A large threshing machine passed through town a few days ago en route to the Dubess farm in the hills west.

A short time ago the Redcliff Pressed Brick Co. here shipped a car load of face brick a long distance. These bricks were shipped to Yellowknife, N.W.T.

Mrs. Alex McColeman and son James, of Claybank, Sask., arrived in town Friday morning to spend a few days with Hugh. Mrs. McColeman is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. Laville and Jimmy is staying with Hugh at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Thacker. They come especially to be present at the opening of the new Swimming Pool for which Hugh was the engineer.

Farmer at Bowell Had Been Held Up

Young Man Took His Money And Now in Penitentiary

Some time ago Mr. Olaf Strand, a farmer of the Bowell district, as held up at the point of a gun by three young fellows and robbed of every cent he had. Two of these lads were Phillip Muller, 25 years of age and Emil Dufloth 29 years old. They were caught by the Mounted Police and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary at Prince Albert.

Wm. Schneider, of Medicine Hat, who was with the others but took no part in the actual robbery, had his trial last Saturday and was given a sentence of the court for twelve months.

The Lethbridge Herald estimates the wheat yield of that district will be 34,000,000 bushels.

Mrs. Owen of Seattle, who has been visiting here for the past few weeks with her sisters Mrs. A. E. Shaw and Mrs. E. Martin, left on Wednesday for her home.

There was a fine shower of rain in this district last Sunday, and a great improvement in verdure, pastures and crops but it will delay cutting for a few days.

Frank Goodline, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Goodline met with a painful accident in Bowell last Sunday. He had a fall in which both legs were badly hurt but fortunately were not broken.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lion and their small son of Hamilton, Ont., arrived in town last week-end to visit Albert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Lion. They expect to remain here about a month.

ONTARIO TOBACCO CROP PROMISES TO BREAK ALL RECORDS

Southern Ontario, the largest tobacco growing area in Canada, is preparing to harvest the biggest crop in its history. Despite the wet summer there were 920,000 acres of flue-cured and 5,142 acres of burley, which should bring the growers about $18,000,000. There is a ready market for a Canadian flue-cured tobacco, which is now of excellent quality, and approximately 80 per cent of it is used in Canadian cigarettes. Our top picture shows tobacco seedlings covered with bags to prevent cross-pollination by bees or other insects.

Calls For Understanding

Settlers From Other Countries Need Help Of Native-Born Canadians

The assimilation of some of the people from European countries who have been attracted to southern Ontario by the flour-cured tobacco industry, many of them to acquire farms in Elgin and Norfolk counties, may be a slow process and one that calls for understanding on the part of native-born Canadians. This statement was made to a representative of The St. Thomas Times-Journal by a newcomer in the Elgin tobacco industry, a native of Hungary, who has been in Canada for several years and has been a naturalized citizen of the Dominion for more than a decade. The Times-Journal representative put the question to him: "Can your people who have come to Ontario and bought farms be readily assimilated?"

"Not too readily," he replied. "Particularly the older people. You must remember that they have come to a new and strange land, bringing with them the habits and customs acquired in a lifetime. Orient your self to Hungary and you will appreciate what I mean—you would naturally retain your Canadian habits and customs for quite a while. The younger people who have come to Canada will be more easily assimilated. They are more flexible, not so set in their ways and habits. The younger people are anxious to become Canadian as soon as possible. They are proud when they get their citizenship papers."

"But why is it that in so many instances in the United States the first generations are the law-abiding while the second generations are the lawless?"

"Too much freedom," he replied. "The second generation—the younger element among these new people—must be made to respect the laws of Canada. Remember they are enjoying freedom and liberties in the country that they have come to, the Old Land. Sometimes it (as you say in Canada) goes to their heads. These people require understanding treatment. They should have the law inculcated in their minds that to enjoy the freedom and liberties of Canadian citizenship is a privilege that they should honor and respect and avoid abusing."

"Another thing that should be remembered," the observant Hungarian said, "is that many of my people who have come here as well as many of the people from other European countries have become landowners on a scale unknown in their native lands. There the acquisition of an acre or two acres of ground often is the accomplishment of two generations or more. Here they work as share croppers a few years, save their money, and are permitted to buy farms of 100 acres or 200 acres. Such new-found importance may also have a tendency to give a few of them, at least, inflated opinions of themselves or, what you call, swollen heads. They must not aspire to be among the great landowners of the Dominion. They should be satisfied with 50 or 100 acres for a few years."

Are Drifting Apart

Archives Official Deplores Lack Of Knowledge Among Settlers

Dr. William Menzies Whitelaw of the Dominion archives staff, who recently made a trip to Australia, told a local service club that "slowly Canada and Australia are drifting farther apart in appreciation of one another."

He deplored what he termed the lack of knowledge of each other which seemed to characterize the dominions. "The degree of ignorance of one another on the part of the dominions is rather appalling," he said.

"One wonders how long an empire that is supposed to be a commonwealth or family of nations can continue if the only contacts that are made are through trade transactions. The truth of the matter is we have not got a commonwealth."

"The time to 'knit the empire together' is when things are going well and not in times of emergency."

There are more non-citizens in China than the whole population of the United States. The 150,000,000 people of northern China exist on wheat, corn, millet, beans and other dry land crops.

It is costing Japan $5,000,000 a day to fight China. It wouldn't be any more expensive to declare war.

National Symbol For Canada

Mounties More Readily Identified Than Animals Or Leaf

A short time ago we defended the artist who wanted to put nine beavers on a Canadian memorial at Ottawa and who had been told that there was no such thing as a family of nine beavers. An American naturalist said that was quite possible.

However, if there is any difficulty about beavers as a national symbol we would suggest the "Mountie". Our personal observations in the Old Country a few months ago when we were the "Mountie" nabbed for their autographs outside the Canadian Pavilion at the Glasgow Exhibition are supplemented by a letter appearing in Canada's Weekly, published in Canada. The letter, written by "A Britisher" in Liverpool, noted the same admiration for the R.C.M.P. guards at the Exhibition, said they have a greater hold on the imagination of the people than the three Guards in Whitehall, and recommends that a "Mountie" be used as the trade mark for all Canadian goods.

The "Mounties" practically "steal the show" from the home and Empire units in the Coronation procession last year. They represented Canada's flag so why not use them on our memorials, use them as our trade mark, and stop arguments about whether a beaver or a maple leaf should appear on our national flag if and when we should have one, use a "Mountie" on that, too. The flag would be more easily identified than with an animal or leaf. —St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Too Self-Satisfied

Friend Had No Trouble Taking Ride Out Of Politics

The politician was very pleased with himself—although, actually, he had very little reason to be. His self-satisfaction annoyed many of his friends, and one of them decided to write him a note one day. "Ah, hello," said the friend, sleeping the budding M.P. on, on the back. "I know you when your name was 'Bill'."

"Bill," came the reply, "I'll have you know, that my ancestors came over with William the Conqueror." "And I remember you when you hadn't a smit to your back," persisted the friend.

"This is a very nasty country. I came from a very nasty family."

"And I've seen you, rolling about like a piece of soap on standing on your feet," the other went on.

"And I've seen you, rolling about like a piece of soap on standing on your feet," the other went on.

FRANCE GIVES TUMULTUOUS WELCOME TO KING AND QUEEN

His Majesty, the King, riding with President Lebrun, leaves the railway station upon his arrival in Paris on his first official visit to France. This photograph was flown across the Atlantic on the pick-a-back plane "Mercury" which completed the first non-stop flight between Ireland and Montreal carrying mail, newspapers, and photographs of the Royal visit to France.

Gold Is Salvaged

Spanish Coins Recovered From Ship Wrecked In 1798

The British frigate Lutine yielded a number of Spanish coins to salvagers seeking her rich treasure of gold and silver.

The Lutine was wrecked in 1798 at the entrance to the Zuyder See in her route to Hamburg. The fortune she carried never has been accurately estimated but has been placed in the neighbourhood of $10,000,000.

The coins were brought to the surface by the Netherlands dredger Karimata, which has undertaken the salvage operations for Lloyd's, the London insurance corporation which paid the insurance when the Lutine sank.

"They were believed to have been taken to the frigate passengers, and the dredger was working over the forecast of the vessel. The actual treasure chamber was believed to be in the afterpart."

The Lutine sank in a gale while carrying a huge sum to Hamburg to save the credit of British merchants during a financial crisis. Since then some $275,000 has been recovered.

A Silly Superstition

A dredging company engaged in deepening the harbor at Golderich, Ont., took out one scoopful of earth on Thursday to avoid starting the project on a Friday. In this so-called enlightened age it is surprising how people still allow their lives to be influenced by silly superstitions and beliefs.

"How can you call it a love match? He must be worth quite $50,000 a year."

"Well, isn't $50,000 a year lovely?"

PICK-A-BACK PLANE SETS RECORD IN NON-STOP FLIGHT TO MONTREAL

In addition to being the first plane to fly to Montreal non-stop from Ireland, the pick-a-back plane "Mercury" also was the first plane flying under such conditions to carry a payload to Canada. The picture above shows the "Mercury" landing on the St. Lawrence at Montreal.

History Is Revived

Honor Man 'Saved Maritime Province For The Empire'

The man who saved the maritime provinces for the empire was honored at historic Fort Beauséjour.

The only cannon left by the French when they were driven from the fort boomers over windward. Taitnamar marshes in salute. A bell tolled—the same bell with which Abbe Loutre, bitter enemy of the English, summoned his parishioners in Acadian days.

The ashes of Major Thomas Dixon, taken from a branch-covered and forgotten grave, were re-interred with an impressive military service, while thousands watched silently.

This, 192 years after his death, a hero took his place in the history of Canada. Speakers mingled his deeds of courage, and told how he had braved the Bay of Fundy in an open boat to obtain reinforcements when strategically placed Beauséjour was besieged by American rebels.

End Of Drouth Era

Weather Now Favoring Rain Over The Whole Continent

Weather favoring drouth has turned to weather favoring rain "over the whole continent," A. J. Connor of the Dominion meteorological bureau said.

Mr. Connor said precipitation from Jan. 1 to July 31 this year was above normal in most sections of Canada.

"The heavier fall of rain seems to have followed naturally on years of drouth in Saskatchewan and sections of the United States," Mr. Connor said.

The L2-130, the meter ship of the Hudsonbay, is 804 feet long and has a beam capacity of more than 1,000,000 cubic feet. Its flying range will be approximately 7,000 miles. The top speed will carry 40 passengers.

Depicts Pre-Historic Time

Aged Canadian Artist Completes Mural For Royal Museum

Story of the 24 periods of prehistory is told on a large mural painting completed at Toronto by 77-year-old C. A. Reid, R.C.A., well-known Canadian artist, who has given four years of his life to the task.

The mural, which covers an entire wall at the Royal Ontario Museum of Paleontology, consists of 34 panels, the largest of which measures nine by 35 feet.

Mr. Reid said his imagination was originally fired by a motion picture, "The Lost Worlds," which showed early geological landscape and the varied development of plants and animals.

The painting depicts in fascinating array the full way, the birth of the solar system, formation of the earth's outer system and early development of plant, water, insect, and reptile life. Tool-using birds are shown beside giant plant-eating dinosaurs.

Keeps His Vow

A veteran and articulate citizen of Audubon, Iowa, hasn't uttered a voluntary word in the past 50 years. It seems that when his bride-to-be deserted him at the altar in 1887 he vowed he'd never speak till she returned. She never did. And he's worn his wedding suit to church every Sunday since.

Father: "You want to marry my daughter? You have wasted your time coming to ask."

Young Man: "Not at all. I had to deliver a parcel to the man in the fat overcoat in any case."

"You quarrelled with Jack because he proposed last night? You can't mean that!"

"Yes, the silly ass forgot I had accepted him the night before."

More Mental Cases

Overcrowding In Mental Hospitals In Western Canada

Increase in the number of patients in mental institutions in Canada are dealt with in a report released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The report, although covering the period up to December 31, 1928, presents the latest figures available. At the end of 1928 there were 833 patients resident in the 97 mental institutions, 3,847 were on parole or otherwise absent, making a total of 4,680.

Comparing the figures with those of 1927, the report finds "the total patients under care in mental institutions increased 2,593 during the year. This increase is due primarily to the constant annual excess of admissions over discharges and deaths."

"This continued increase in the population of mental institutions without a corresponding increase in the bed capacity of hospitals presents a serious problem. In view of this, new cases must be admitted in spite of the over-crowding that exists in a large number of mental hospitals."

"Overcrowding is very much in evidence in the mental institutions of the western provinces as we find an average of 115.4 patients per 100 beds in Alberta, 117.4 in Manitoba, 120.5 in Saskatchewan and 133 in British Columbia."

The continued increase in the number of patients under care, the increase in the number of patients admitted as a result of a real increase in the incidence of mental disorders among the general population, and the number of patients in any given year is not related to the birth rate in that year but to the birth rate of a period at least a generation earlier.

Mental disorders are, in the main, disorders of adult life, the average of insane first admissions in 1898 being 33 years.

"The increase in the mental population is not, however, explained by the fact that among those who take an active interest in the care and treatment of the mentally ill, a small mental sickness there is an increasing demand for early treatment of mental diseases."

Air Raid Horrors

Terrible Destruction Which Modern War Implies

The endless variety of horror with which man threatens man by his universal preparation for war was illustrated at a London depicting in the Sun, describing the measures which were taken at the London Sea in the event of an air raid. Dangerous objects were to be shot if endangered by an explosion. Venomous serpents would be killed immediately on the sounding of the air alarm unless they were in the way in which people they would be stored in metal boxes in the cellars of the zoo.

Their minimum scale as this suggests the all-pervading character of the destruction of civilization which modern war implies. The years of labor and exploration would be lost in a modern war for nothing because a dictator wants to bomb a great city.

The "The results of modern life is smashed from the sides. What becomes of the patient in the operating room? What becomes of a hospital when a bomb hits the power plant and darkens the city? The water system is hit and the careful, scientific purification of the supply goes for nothing, threatening a whole population with the diseases and death which science had found a way of preventing. All this is a matter of indifference to the war makers—Baltimore Sun.

Practical Loyalty

South Africa Doing Good Work For Empire Defence

Sometimes it is said that the Union (of South Africa) is reluctant to take part in a mythical scheme for the common defence of the Empire. Actually, says the Hans Daily Mail, Johannesburg, by assuming responsibility for the land defence of Simonstown, this country is making an infinitely larger contribution to the maintenance of the British Navy than the old grant of £85,000 a year. The British Government has itself admitted, in fact, that it would not surrender what the Union is doing at a cost of half a million a year, while a great naval authority has said of the new harbor scheme at Capetown that "the Dominion of South Africa could make no better contribution to the strength of the Empire."

"Ah! If you can't go in by way of Whangfai, how do you go in?"
"By Fourteen, if you want to be a fool and try it."
"What's so tough about that?"
"The weather," Jack intoned. "You don't get any warm winds from the Japanese current, once you're over the Coastal range. It's 25 and 40 below, all the way to the Skinkins."

"I know that," said Tom innocently.
"But why fight the bush for 200 miles, to get down in the snow for a few miles, then be airpiped, or easy travel along the river and mountain trails—"

"Yah, said O'Brien, and find all the claims gone."

"Or you've grabbed up the whole country through a set of dummies," the red-faced man added.
"You can figure that out for your self," Hammond answered sharply, and shoving through the crowd again moved up the street, leaving the throng muttering behind him. But again, a block farther on, his progress was halted. This time it was a woman.

"Well, Prospector," she asked. "Can't you say hello?"
Hammond looked up into the features of a wrinkled person, valiantly battling her age with thick forehead cream, high nose, macaroon eyes and a heavily lip-sticked mouth. Yet it was a worthy face, and his eyes set in crows' feet of humor and experience; lips which life had hardened without leaving them thin.

"Well, Annie," he exclaimed. "How are you?"

"About the same as the last time I saw you—when we made the rush together into Rouyn, in Quebec."

"That's right. Glad to see you again, Annie."

"Thanks. That goes double, Prospector."

Silence followed. For an instant Jack Hammond felt annoyed at this interruption. Then he dismissed her; it was only around the World and she had made every Canadian gold rush of the last twenty years. Around the World Annie, with her love of frontier knowledge, her inevitable thickness of paint and macaroon and garish clothes, her log cabin at the edge of camp with its dense hall, still drink, its screaming phonograph.

"Living here, are you, Annie?" Hammond asked at last. Around the World Annie straightened. An effusive woman, with what might be called an old-fashioned figure, she ground a loose fold of dress, and raised a diamond-fingered hand to restrain a wisp of bleached hair, willing with the dampness of the incessant rain. Then, with a jerk of her head, she indicated a group of dance hall girls who stood in a nearby doorway, as though they had been herded, all of them wearing.

"Latin, Prospector," she asked. "Would I be chaperoning that gang of girls if I was living here in Prince Rupert?"

"But where are you headed for?" she grinned, the wrinkles forerunner of a wisp of bleached hair, willing with the dampness of the incessant rain. "Bad news?"
"Nothing that concerns Joe or you. Some one who was in here just before you came. I had to be pretty frank—and the truth in this case is fairly rotten."

"That's always tough."

"Yes, to cut the foundations out from under somebody—destroy illusions, paint things exactly as they are. Especially with a woman."

"A young woman, wasn't she?"
"Rather good-looking—poorly dressed."

"Oh, you saw her?"
"We passed on the stairs. She looked pretty well cut out. Client of yours?"

"Well," the attorney hesitated. "Not exactly—sort of a volunteer client—that is—"

"With an effort, he assumed an attitude of brusque interest. "What are you in here about so early in the morning?"

"Joe left a note for me. Gone north—guess you know that. He's leaving right now with many supplies. Afraid somebody will jump on claims. Wants me to follow as soon as I can with a couple of dog teams and a complete outfit. That newspaper stuff."

"Get it all out of your system down there in Seattle did you, Jack?"

"Hammond stirred uneasily. "Well, that depends on how you look at it. Personally, I feel great about it. But someone else might just think I had been on an ordinary drunk."

"The newspapers gave you quite a lot of publicity."

"I've been hearing about that ever since I landed. It's rotten in a way—I started to look out of the window to see if I had been followed."

"Oh, Barstow, elbows on his desk, steepled his fingers. "I don't think it's done so much damage. Just because the rush is little earlier—it will have gone anyway. What happened in Seattle?"

"I met a girl I was in love with."

"One of those first-night affairs?"

"Yes," Hammond put out his hand, holding it a few feet above the floor. "I was crazy about her since I was the big and handsome. Key was sent to be president of the Sunflower Bank and Trust. He died about a year ago. We used to live down the street from each other. Rather, at an angle—I lived by the alley."

"Childhood playmates?"

"No." A nervous expression had come into the young prospector's eyes. "I can never have anything to do with me."

"I don't quite understand."

"My father was a switchman. My work most of my life. My mother took in washing."

Gifts For Princess Elizabeth

Paris Sending Carefully Chosen Library of French Books

Twelve-year-old Princess Elizabeth, who did not accompany her parents on their visit to France, will be presented by the city of Paris with a carefully chosen library of French books considered ideal reading for a growing girl.

The first time Paris has ever bestowed such a gift on a royal child. Many of the great French classics were automatically put in view of their inappropriateness for a girl of Elizabeth's age. On the other hand it was decided to avoid giving her a collection of literary books of doubtful permanent literary merit.

The books finally chosen, it was explained, may be divided into two groups—one appropriate for a princess of her 12th or 13th year, the other more suitable for reading in later years.

The 20 books of the first group will furnish a permanent library of French literature on ancient and modern French culture.

New Kind of State

When one of the knobs of his radio receiving set refused to move, a man in the editorial library of the day and he began to violently vibrate. On looking inside the owner found a mouse wound round the valves.

"Well?" he asked quietly—almost unhappily.

Hammond eyed him. Barstow was usually good for a joke.

"Stomach out of order?"

"He shrugged his shoulders. "None at me?"

"For letting this thing out?" The attorney smiled.

"That's between you and McKenzie Joe."

"Oh, Joe's taking it all right. A little caustic, but—"

"Joe's natural state."

"Yes," Hammond laughed. There was an awkward silence. The attorney wiped his glasses, then, strutting the edge of a sheet of legal paper.

"Get quite myself this morning," he apologized. Then, abruptly, "I'm not much good at telling people things that hurt."

Increase Colonial Troops

France Strengthening Her Armed Forces in Northern Africa

France is following the advice of one of her Great War generals by strengthening her armed forces with troops from the colonies—the "black reservoir" of man power.

General Charles Marie Emmanuel Mangin, commander in chief of French colonial troops in the Great War, urged that a standing army of 1,500,000 men be kept in the colonies ready for action anywhere in France's world-wide empire.

Mangin, who died in 1925, saw the prizes of the "black reservoir" had the French general staff turned a deaf ear to his plea until Edward Daladier took office in 1933.

After the general's death. Until this spring France's colonial army, which does not include her troops in North Africa, totalled only 73,000 men. One of Daladier's first acts was to call for the recruiting of 60,000 additional troops.

Military sources said that was only a beginning, that colonial troops would total 180,000 in 1935. That still was far from Mangin's dream, but the new colonial forces already have raised the total of French armed forces to between 900,000 and 1,000,000 men. The new troops are being called in from Africa and Indo-China.

The new African troops from the Sahel will be an important element in the event of trouble with Italy.

The War Debt

Britain's Obligations To United States Open For Consideration

The Earl of Stanhope to the house of lords that the question of Great Britain's war debt to the United States "is left open for consideration at the moment both governments feel likely to arrive at a solution satisfactory to each."

Lord Stanhope, government leader in the house of lords, declared: "It may be well to contradict suggestions sometimes made that the British government fail to recognize the great importance of this question or that the debt has been repaid."

He spoke after Viscount Samuel, Liberal, suggested the United States might be willing to pass the debt to the British government's resumption of power "which is intended to safeguard the peace of the world."

Enjoy Seeing Trains Arrive

People In City And Country Are Very Much Alike

Many pictures and stories concerning new streamlined trains inaugurated on many railroads indicate that these trains are reviving a good old American custom, according to the Washington Post.

The early days inhabitants of small towns used to rush down to the "depot" to see the trains come in and films from Hollywood now depict that as still one of the customary scenes of the day.

But these streamlined trains, which have attracted attention and been the cause of crowds collecting at the "depot" in some of the best of American cities, to see the train come in or go out. After all, these are just like the country folks, only more of them in a given area. They still like to watch the trains go by, just as their forebears used to do.

A Noteworthy Fact

"Democracy," says Thomas Mann, "is nothing but the political name for the idea which Christianity brought into the world as religion." It is a noteworthy fact that most of the countries which demand democracy eventually discard Christianity.

Lord Tweedmouth says the best answer to the folly of dictatorship is laughter. As long as you remember to laugh before you get your dictator.

The pelican can dive from the air and match a swiftly moving fish that is far beneath the surface of the water.

Creative Music For Children

New Idea For Schools Is Explained By Teacher

Creative music, played on homemade glass instruments—a xylophone is eventually planned—drew the right sort of pleasure from a group of girl students.

"It's a new wrinkle in school music," explained Mrs. Carl K. Sullivan, the teacher, as she surveyed the results obtained by her class of girls at the Young Women's Christian Association in Elmont, N.Y.

The girls stepped up to a table lined with glass tumblers filled with varying amounts of water. They tapped the sides with the spoons and the result was a clearly defined rendition of "Three Blind Mice."

"Even untrained children take pleasure in learning the scale when tumblers represent notes," she cried. "The music makers, she said, were constructing a xylophone from bars of plate glass, which was a "very difficult task" since the rings of glass vibrate unaccountably—regardless of length.

Emphasizing the importance of music in character building, Mrs. Sullivan recalled the advice of Walter Dill Scott, noted symphonic conductor: "Give a child a horn to blow and he'll never carry a gun."

Aid To Fishermen

Rehabilitation Work In Southern Alberta Results In Secondary Industry

Farm rehabilitation work undertaken by F.P.R.A. in the rolling hills district of southern Alberta has made possible a secondary industry—fishing.

During the past winter, several carloads of whitefish were taken from Lake Newell and shipped as far as New York for sale, F.P.R.A. officials said.

The rehabilitation of Lake Newell was in existence before the advent of the farm rehabilitation program but repairs and improvements were made by the F.P.R.A. work.

When the level of the water in Lake Newell was raised, it was stocked with fish. Last winter fishing on a commercial basis was resumed with the result that several carloads were shipped out of Alberta for eastern American ports.

Served By Expert Chefs

Royal Dinner In Paris Was Something To Marvel At

The ten best chefs in the world combined their culinary skill to create King George and Queen Elizabeth. The result was something to marvel at.

The royal dinner was a gastronomic highlight of the three-day royal visit of state, served in the brilliant Hall of Mirrors of the Louvre.

The experts burred with elaborate menus for the super-meat, and to do it justice, they said, would take at least three hours.

The vegetables were grown specially out of season at Limoges and sent to Versailles in two planes.

Table baskets containing cakes were made of woven straw of sugar tied at the corners of the baskets and British colors.

Famous Toy Maker

Man Who Created The Teddy Bear Dies In New York

Morris Mitchell, 66, Russian immigrant doll maker, whose teddy bear was the childhood joy of millions of Canadians and Americans, died recently in New York.

A pioneer in the North American doll industry, Mitchell was chairman of the board of the Ideal Novelty and Toy Company, which he founded in 1905. 14 years after he came to New York from Russia, a promise made.

When he started his business, the teddy bear, his first creation, became an immediate success. He made one of the first unbreakable dolls, then revolutionized the trade with "child-proof" that blinked their eyes.

The Tin Can Ken

Housewives are busier these days—at least in the use of can openers. The board of public works in Los Angeles reports that tin can collections now total 130 truckloads a day, as against only half that amount in 1921.

Did you read about the hitch-hiker who hit an undisciplined mudsucker with a truck and then followed it clear across the continent? Friend, when a man dogs a bit, that's new.

Planned Health Policy

New Proposals For National Health Insurance In Britain

Revolutionary changes in the general medical services of the United Kingdom have been drafted and approved in principle by the British Medical Association, and legislation to implement the recommendations will be introduced at the next session of parliament.

Main principles of the scheme, which contemplates a new national organization would provide for: 1. A system of medical service directed to the achievement of positive health and prevention of disease, no less than to the relief of sickness.

2. The right of every individual to nominate a family doctor of his own choice.

3. Specialist, laboratory service and institutional care made available to all through the family doctor.

4. Co-ordination of the medical services in all of the planned health policy.

The proposed scheme, he said, would be operated through a central controlling body for the whole country which would be independent but representative of the medical profession. Local auxiliary bodies would be created in selected centres.

Apart from those entitled to national health insurance, approximately 20,000,000 members of the population would be embraced in the new proposal and qualify for medical services they never enjoyed before.

Letter Saved His Life

Written By Lord Baden Powell To Scout In Hospital

Eric Hall, who was formerly commissioner of Boy Scouts in America, told of an incident a few years ago when one of his scouts lost a leg in an accident. "He was slowly dying in hospital through sheer lack of care," he said. "Then Lord Baden Powell, to whom I had written, sent a letter to him. Everything changed. He fought and lived." This letter is now framed in the Scout headquarters at Albany, New York. The sequel to the four pages of youthful signature which was sent by the scout troop to Lord Baden Powell, wishing him a speedy recovery from his recent illness. His letter to the scout in New York, in the opinion of doctors and the hospital authorities, was undoubtedly the turning point in the boy's fight for life.

An Unusual Event

Parade At Golden Wedding Anniversary Of Their Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Asselin of Pinewood, near Fort Frances, Ont., were central figures in a family reunion marking the golden wedding anniversary of their daughter, Mrs. Thomas Joliffe of St. Bonaventure, Que.

Six generations of the family—40 in all—were present at the reunion. Mr. Asselin is past 90 and his wife is 84.

First President to go beyond the legal boundaries of the United States while holding office was Grover Cleveland. He went out past the three-mile limit while fishing in the Atlantic ocean.
